After Mr. Stein had listened to the Committee long enough to hear what was wanted of him, he sprang upon Baron-Dees, grabled him by the collar, and after shaking him in a lively manner, hustled him to the door and three him downstairs.

Haron-Dees went back to Pythageras Hall and passed resolutions denouncing Mr. Stein. As the ball of fire flashed through the heavens it left behind a broad tail of light which glimmered and then disappeared. A hissing sound accompanied the display.
